5. The Organizer reserves the right to make reasonable changes to the programme, schedule, speakers, venue, format, technical arrangements or other organizational, operational, commercial, legal, safety, security or other legitimate reasons. Such changes shall not, in themselves, constitute grounds for any claim against the Organizer. The Organizer will make every effort to notify Participants of significant changes as soon as possible.
6. These Terms and Conditions constitute an integral part of the registration process. Submission of the registration form constitutes acceptance of these Terms and Conditions.
7. These Terms and Conditions shall be interpreted and applied subject to any mandatory provisions of applicable law. Nothing in these Terms and Conditions shall exclude or limit any liability, right or obligation to the extent that such exclusion or limitation is prohibited by applicable law.

2. Registration is subject to availability of places and any eligibility criteria specified by the Organizer. Submission of a registration form does not in itself guarantee participation. The Organizer shall determine whether to accept a registration, taking into account, among other things, the capacity of the venue, the intended audience, the relevance of the applicant’s professional background, security considerations and the organizational objectives of the Seminar.
3. The Organizer may request additional information reasonably necessary to verify an applicant’s identity, eligibility or registration details. The Organizer may refuse to process or confirm a registration where the required information has not been provided, cannot reasonably be verified, appears materially inaccurate or raises legitimate organizational, legal or security concerns. Any processing of personal data for these purposes shall be carried out in accordance with applicable data protection law.

7. The Organizer may refuse, suspend or revoke confirmation of participation, or deny or withdraw access to the Seminar, where reasonably justified by capacity limitations, inaccurate or incomplete registration information, failure to comply with these Terms and Conditions, applicable law or venue rules, security concerns, disruptive conduct, harassment, threats, unauthorized recording, unauthorized distribution of materials, or other conduct that may interfere with the proper conduct of the Seminar or the rights, safety or legitimate interests of the Organizer, other Participants or third parties.
8. Where reasonably practicable, the Organizer shall inform the affected applicant or Participant of the relevant decision. However, where immediate action is necessary to protect persons, property, confidential information or the orderly conduct of the Seminar, the Organizer may act without prior notice or an opportunity to remedy the situation. No compensation shall be payable solely as a result of such refusal, suspension, revocation or denial of access, subject to mandatory provisions of applicable law.
9. 3. Information about material changes affecting the Seminar will be communicated through channels available to the Organizer, including the event website and/or contact details provided during registration.
4. As participation is free of charge, cancellation, postponement or modification of the Seminar does not give rise to reimbursement of travel, accommodation or other costs incurred by a Participant, or to compensation for any loss or damage arising therefrom, including loss of business opportunities or profits, to the fullest extent permitted by applicable law.
5. In the event of force majeure or other circumstances beyond the Organizer's reasonable control, the Organizer shall not be liable for failure or delay in performing the affected obligations to the extent permitted by applicable law.
